

Here is my model of Reality, that shows the whole picture as I can see it. I think, that Buddhism is only showing half of reality – by Intention. Siddhartha Gautama must have known, that there is much more, than his teaching – but to realize liberation (Anatta, objective pole only) it is enough to know, what he has said.

Yin Yang

I think the Core-Teachings of Buddha are only a Teaching-Device to simplify things and make the self+Self disappear. Because realizing of no-self is liberation from suffering in itself.

The normal experiencing of Awareness (awaring of data) is at the upper Half-Wave of Awareness, because there is Content - and therefore also a conscious experience of it (information, thought).

The not-experiencing of Awareness is at the lower Half-Wave of Awareness, because there is no Content - and therefore no knowing of Content – which appears as Gaps, seen from the 6 Sense-Streams.

Yin Yang

Therefore, in buddhistic teachings, Awareness is impermanent – because there is only a conscious experience in the upper Half-Wave but not in the lower one. So, if one wants to know the whole picture – one must also realize the lower Half-Wave, which is only a “subconscious knowing of itself” and therefore unknown to the information-related upper-Half-Wave-Experiencing. This Information-Experiencing which is believed as “I am experiencing” is it, which is purged away, when the Sine-Wave passes the Zero-Line downwards. If the Sine-Wave passes the Zero-Line upwards the experiencing and the believed “I, the experienter” are established new.

The Yin-Yang-Symbol shows clearly, that the Ancients knew the Fact, that there is a Sine-Wave. And I think, that also the old Zen-Masters or Mahamudra-Masters knew this – but this Knowledge is not contained in the Scriptures but was transferred only orally.

Also the saying: “nirvana is at no other place as samsara” - or nirvana is samsara – shows clearly that there is no other dimension far away - but simply the content-free other side of the sinewave.

In the picture are showed only Sinewaves from aside. But if you look from above on many sinewaves – what would you see? A gigantic luminous black field of no-thing-ness or no-information-ness – on which different points are flashing irregular on and off. And exactly this is realized if movements of the Sinewaves are directly experienced. I can literally feel-see this directly with my “inner eye”. It is also seen with the visual eye, heard with the audible ear, can be felt by touching something etc. This subtle vibrating and flashing of the sinewaves can be experienced with all 6 senses.
